NEW 60' Double Plug Door Box Car

This 60' double plug door box car is painted Cypress Green and has riveted sides. It was designed for the automotive industry's need to transporting high-density components such as castings and transmission assemblies. Ford, along with competing railroads and car builders, cooperated to speed delivery of the box cars. In 1963-64, DT&I rostered two number series built by Greenville Steel Car Co. In 1977, the fleet was serviced and repainted. Yellow block letters replaced the original compass logo.

Smithsonian Civil War Series
Car #4: Battle of Shiloh

With more than 23,000 casualties, the two-day Battle at Shiloh was, at that time, the bloodiest battle in American history. On the first day of fighting, Union troops were caught off guard by a Confederate attack. By afternoon, they had formed a battle line to hold their position. The fighting continued until after dark. By the next morning, Union reinforcements arrived, outnumbering the Confederates. A Union counter-offensive overpowered the Confederate forces.
