

NEW Candian Pacific
Road Numbers CP 277095 / 277193

These 40' despatch stock cars are painted red with white masked sides. Lettering is both white and black on red placards. It was built in 1958, serviced in September 1981, and runs on Bettendorf trucks. Numbered into a 200-car road series 277000-277199, they feature eight panels per side. Stock cars that were shipped before 1968 were left in their original Freight Car Brown with white paint; cars that were shipped after 1968 received the new CP Action Red and white paint. The lower portion of the stock car sides was painted white to camouflage the lime spray that was used to disinfect the cars after cleaning.

NEW Erie Lackawanna
Road Number TTX 940772

Micro-Trains collaborated with Eastern Seaboard Models to offer a bi-level auto rack featuring protective stainless steel vandal panels! The model has a light freight car red rack mounted on a yellow Trailer Train flatcar. It includes etched stainless steel vandal panels to represent the prototype as it appeared in the late 1970s and 1980s. As with the prototype, the deck flaps are not present. Prior to the appearance of enclosed auto racks, open frame auto racks were equipped with stainless steel panels to deter vandalism while in transit.

Southern Pacific®
Road Number SP 73757

In February 1917, Ralston Steel Company delivered 450 of these class SM cars to Southern Pacific. It is a 40' despatch stock car with single door and is painted brown with white lettering. Railroads have long played a key role in livestock transportation. In the early days of perishable shipments, freshness was ensured if livestock could be delivered to market on the hoof. Stock cars were developed to meet this need. Southern Pacific, with over 11,000 miles of track, has been a major mover of livestock.
